

I choose this method to display both clients in the same flow chart because if you add any number of clients the flow chart would be the same. The two threads are represented by the fact that we have a data object called "Handler Map" which keeps track if the user already has a session on the server or not. If they don't then a thread is created for them and they are added to the map

